Bridge

by Alfred Sheinwold

When Los Angeles businessman Paul Miller was named chairman for the year of the United Way campaign, his bridge playing friends were not surprised. At the bridge table, at any rate, Miller knows the importance of an early donation.

Miller took the ace of spades, noting that he would lose two spades and two diamonds if he played the hand routinely. The winning line of play depended on giving the opponents more than they were entitled to.

Declarer took the ace of hearts and lead a heart to the ten. Then he re-turned dummy's king of clubs.

When East played low (for the best of reasons), Miller discarded a spade, muttering amiably: "Live and let live."

West wasn't a bit grateful. No matter how the defense continued, Miller could draw the last trump with dummy's queen and then lead the queen and jack of clubs to discard diamonds. In all, he lost one club, one spade and one diamond.

DAILY QUESTION: Partner bids one diamond, you respond one spade, and he then bids two notrump. The opponents pass. You hold: Spades-Q J 10 9; Hearts-8 5 4; Diamonds-10 9 8, and Clubs-A 9 7. What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid three notrump. Partner's jump promises 19 or 20 points in high cards, and you have seven points. You should accept the invitation since there is usually a reasonable play for game when the partnership count is 26 points.
